

Effect of phenolic compounds on elastic and strength properties, thermo-, heat resistance of molded polyurethane

© Sergey V. Nesterov⁺, Yakov D. Samuilov*⁺,

Indira N. Bakirova, and Alexander Ya. Samuilov

Department of Technology of Synthetic Rubber. Kazan National Research Technological University.

K.Marx St., 68. Kazan, 420015. Tatarstan Republic. Russia.

Phone: +7 (843) 231-42-14. E-mail: sergei_nesterov@yahoo.com

*Supervising author; ⁺Corresponding author

Keywords: isocyanates, polyurethanes, thermal resistance, heat resistance, thermal degradation, and phenolic compounds.

Abstract

The effect of different in structure and elemental composition phenolic compounds on thermal resistance of the samples of molded polyurethanes based on polyether has been studied. Phenolic compounds at moderate temperatures (150 °C) exhibit distinct stabilizing effect, leading to the preservation of elastic and strength parameters.