

On kinetic regularities of acetylated morphinanes decay in alkaline environment

© Mikhail A. Drozdov,¹ and Vadim V. Gladyrev^{1,2*†}

¹ Forensic Science Centre of the Ministry of Interior of Russia.

Zoe and Alexander Kosmodemiansky's St., 5. Moscow, 125130. Russia.

² Department of Examination in a Doping- and Drug Enforcement. D. Mendeleev University of Chemical Technology. Miusskaya St. 9. Moscow, 420008. Russia. E-mail: vad.431@gmail.com

*Supervising author; †Corresponding author

Keywords: drug enforcement, morphinanes, hydrolysis, high performance liquid chromatography, gas chromatography with mass-selective detection.

Abstract

The article deals with studying the kinetic regularities of hydrolytic conversion processes of substances containing acetylated morphinanes. The ways are suggested for conversional optimization of the given process. Possibility is shown for control over qualitative and quantitative composition of reactionary masses with the use of methods of high performance liquid chromatography and gas chromatography with mass-selective detection.