

Raspberry leaves and black currant leaves as a promising source of bioactive compounds of flavonoid family with hypolipidemic activity

© Nino R. Chekhani,^{1+*} Lyudmila A. Pavlova,² and Sergey V. Kozin¹

¹ Laboratory of Bioactive Compounds Institute of Pharmacy. I.M. Sechenov First Moscow State Medical University. Trubetskaya St., 8. Moscow, 119991. Russia.

Phone: +7 (495) 708-39-71.

² Department of Organization of Pharmaceutical Practice. N.I. Pirogov Russian National Research Medical University. Ostrovityanova St., 1. Moscow, 117997. Russia. E-mail: rsmu@rsmu.ru

*Supervising author; +Corresponding author

Keywords: raspberry leaves extract, blackberry leaves extract, hypolipidemic activity.

Abstract

The purpose of this study is to investigate the hypolipidemic properties of raspberry leaves and black currant leaves extracts. The study was conducted in a hyperlipidemic experimental animal model with Polysorbate-80. The data obtained from experiment shows the existence of hypolipidemic properties of selected species of medicinal plants and the prospects of its further study and use.